

The compiler reads
the source code

... and generates object code.

You execute the program
(one way or another)

... and the result
appears on the screen.